Public hopes misdirected

Lecturer stresses rights, government involvement

BY ROBIN LEWIS
Staff Writer

The American public should not expect the government to provide happiness, but instead should watch for infractions of citizen rights, an Institute for Urban Studies professor said Thursday.

Economist Dr. Robert L. Bish said public servants' beliefs that they alone know what is in the public's best interest requires citizen involvement in governmental decisions. Bish was speaking at the school of Communicative Arts and Humanities' final lecture of the year, "Can Government Provide Happiness?"

This involvement, explained Bish, insures the needs of the public will actually be met, and prevents government from attaining too much control over the personal lives of its citizens and limiting their happiness.

"Happiness is the perceived ability to control one's own life," said Bish.

Freedom from coercion into doing or saying something one does not believe in, or living in a way one does not support, said Bish, is the basis of a good government. The personal rights of "life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness" are rights that both support and are defended by the U.S. Constitution.

Bish said the Constitution was written to protect Americans from governmental coercion by creating a system of governmental checks and balances, the right of a citizen to sue the government, and a means to enforce personal rights. The Constitution was meant to model a government "in our self interest."

But with the increase in the government's role in a citizen's life since the 1940s, said Bish, such decisions have not been made with the public entirely in mind. Some decisions, he contended, have been made in the self-interest of the bureaucrats who make them.

The utilitarian philosophy of public service, said Bish, places less emphasis on governmental processes in decisions designed to protect the citizen, and puts more value on the end result.

"Now, people who think they know what to do (for the public) think they should be allowed to take short-cuts" around these controls to implement their decisions, said Bish. They don't believe the public is intelligent enough to know what is best for itself, he said.

ASI passes budget, reinstates clubs' subsidies

BY MARY McALISTER
Staff Writer

The controversial and much revised 1981-82 budget passed unanimously Wednesday as the senate cleared much of its leftover legislation and prepared for its final meeting next week.

The budget had faced opposition from many fronts early this quarter before the fee increase approval on April 9 gave the ASI the extra funds it needed to avoid cutting programs and services.

Groups such as the rodeo team, rugby team, Filipino Students Association and Hobby Garage had no subsidy in the first pre-fee increase budget plan, but the groups received their requested subsidies when the finance committee allocated added funds after the election.

Other groups, including Program Board, Disabled Student Services, Intramurals and the Learning Assistance Center, had previously received only partial subsidies but were also revitalized with fee increase funds.

The chess team and sailing team were allocated funds under the new groups category and the Instructionally Related Activities Board received $49,000, including a $4,000 transfer from the Intramurals budget, which will be assisted by the Student Affairs division.

The ASI's contribution to IRA included a $20,000 administrative allowance and $29,000 programs subsidy which sparked some debate as many senators argued that some money should be earmarked for minor sports while others did not want to tie the hands of the ASI and IRA by limiting options.

The approved compromise requested that the IRA make minor sports including men's soccer, water polo, swimming, volleyball, tennis, women's swimming, softball and tennis a high priority in their budget decision.

The senate also approved the rest of the funds for the student evaluation of faculty project conducted by the Political Action Club as a model for a proposed university-wide poll.

After some debate on the number and location of evaluation forms, the senate agreed to release the remaining funds for printing approximately 200 forms to be distributed to department heads, the University Union, selected teachers and selected student meeting areas next week.

The senate also passed a resolution on university research which encourages certain types of inquiry that will not interfere with the undergraduate emphasis and the learn-by-doing approach at Cal Poly.

The Student Relations Board codes and Child Center code revisions were also passed, but the Mustang Dance Team codes failed to gain two-thirds approval.

A highly debated bill proposing the merger of the Administrative and Academic Councils and committees into the Administrative and Academic Commissions was postponed until next week when President-elect Dennis Hawk will express his views on the matter.

Dorm ballast exchange expanded to campus

BY RUSS SPENCER
Staff Writer

The plan to replace light ballasts in the red-brick dorms is being expanded to all ballasts on campus suspected of leakage, said Executive Dean of Facilities Planning Doug Gerard.

Gerard said that funds are not now available to replace all ballasts on campus, but he hopes funds are made available in the future. The cost of replacing the 22,000 pre-1977 ballasts would be $600,000, he said.

Student electric shop workers will have the responsibility of replacing the ballasts, said Donald Van Acker, campus environmental health and safety officer. He added, "They are the best qualified individuals for the task."

He said he has ordered additional worker safety equipment, including foot covers and thick rubber gloves, since concern over worker safety became public two weeks ago.

He said he is also hoping to gain access soon to a new PCB detoxification process approved by the federal government Tuesday. The chemical process could be used to neutralize PCBs in transformers stored on campus.

A program to replace all of the ballasts containing PCB is needed, Van Acker said, "because we found that the level of PCB in ballasts is high enough to cause concern."

Electric shop worker Roger Sinheimer said the "attitude around the shop is that changing ballasts is a total waste of time until a determination is made of what specific ballasts do really need to be changed."

Watt ponders longer oil leases

WASHINGTON (AP) — Interior Secretary James G. Watt says an extension of the initial five-year offshore oil lease period may be in order for some Outer Continental Shelf exploration and development.

Watt expressed that sentiment in a letter to Rep. William Hughes, D-N.J., who had expressed his reservations about a planned offshore oil lease sale in the Mid-Atlantic region later this year. The congressman made a copy of the letter available Wednesday.

The secretary told Hughes he was considering using "an initial lease term of up to 10 years when necessary to encourage exploration and development in areas because of unusually deep water or other unusually adverse conditions."

He noted that he has proposed 10-year leases for tracts that lie in water depths of 400 to 2,100 meters — roughly 1,600 feet to 7,000 feet — in a sale in the South Atlantic.

"While technology doesn't currently exist to produce in the very deep water, it is our belief, based on testimony from industry, that the offering and leasing of deep-water tracts will stimulate and accelerate the development of appropriate technology," Watt said.

Hughes, whose district includes the southern New Jersey coast, had told Watt earlier this year that the proposed December sale in the Baltimore Canyon Trough off the coasts of New Jersey, Delaware, Maryland and Virginia would "only encourage speculative bidding by the industry."

He said about 20 percent of the 253 tracts involved are in depths of water 6,600 feet or more. That is 1,600 feet beyond the reach of current technology, the congressman said.

He said the proposed lease sale would be "highly unlikely to attract much in the way of bonus bidding or oil industry interests."

The leasing of tracts which cannot be developed under current technology "will not lead to any increase in our nation's oil supplies, but such leasing will mislead people into a false sense of security or a belief that we are making progress when the contrary is true."

He said if it turns out that there are substantial reserves of oil or natural gas in the deep-water tracts of the sale area, "the oil industry will undoubtedly and justifiably view the sale as the bargain of the century."

Hughes said the bids will reflect oil prices at 1981 levels, although no oil is expected until 1991, at the earliest, when prices may be much higher.

"In short, the only party which stands to benefit from leasing extremely deep water tracts at this time is the oil industry," the congressman said.

Burn victim sues for $20 million

MARTINEZ, Calif. (AP) — A non-smoker badly burned when a friend's smoldering cigarette ignited his sofa has filed a $20 million lawsuit aimed at getting the tobacco industry to come up with self-extinguishing cigarettes.

The suit, filed Tuesday by the San Francisco firm of noted attorney Melvin Belli, asks the Philip Morris Corp. and the Tobacco Institute — the lobbying arm of the cigarette industry — to pay general and punitive damages for injuries suffered by James T. Clay of Antioch.

Clay, 22, sustained second and third-degree burns over 40 percent of his body in the March 27 accident. The suit asks $10 million for him and another $10 million for his twin brother, Timothy Clay, who the suit says suffered "emotional trauma" in witnessing the accident.

Attorney Bill Choulos of the Belli firm said a main purpose of the suit is to spur efforts to require manufacturers to make cigarettes that would extinguish themselves after a short period if not puffed on.

Polish cardinal dies of cancer

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Cardinal Stefan Wyszyński, who guided Poland's Roman Catholic Church through more than 30 years of Communist rule and was a mentor of Polish-born Pope John Paul II, died here Thursday of cancer. He was 79 and had been ill for about six weeks.

The pope, in a Rome hospital recovering from a May 13 assassination attempt, was told of the death of Wyszyński by Vatican officials and asked to be left alone to pray, the Vatican said. He later sent a telegram to Poland saying he shared in the "agony and prayer" of all Poles.

In death, Wyszyński was hailed as a "patriot" by the Communist regime that once confined him to house arrest.

Church leaders and other Poles gathered to pay their last respects and file past the coffin at his residence, where white and yellow papal flags and red and white Polish flags fluttered in a breeze. Priests and nuns flanked the silvery, metallic coffin, with Wyszyński's red cardinal's hat on top amid a huge bouquet of flowers.

Settlement near in coal strike

WASHINGTON (AP) — Union and industry representatives teetered Thursday on the brink of a settlement that could end the nationwide coal strike.

Although expectations were heightened following marathon bargaining the day before, apparently a few — though minor — issues still had not been resolved when bargainers emerged from a 3½-hour morning session at a downtown Washington hotel.

The two sides took a lunch break and then resumed talks, forcing postponement of a meeting of the full United Mine Workers bargaining council, scheduled by union president Sam Church.

Church had told reporters the night before that major progress was made toward resolving the differences which still stood in the way of a new three-year contract between the UMW and the Bituminous Coal Operators Association.

Church suggested the remaining issues were minor, and a settlement could be announced within hours.

Church's confidence prompted him to ask for the now-postponed meeting of the 39-member bargaining council, whose blessing is but the first step in the union's complex ratification process.

And, certainly, there was no iron-clad guarantee that the UMW's 160,000 members, who rejected an earlier tentative pact and have been on strike for two months, would accept an updated version.

The miners rejected by a better than 2-1 margin the earlier accord, which was strongly supported by Church and his fellow negotiators and approved 21-14 by the bargaining council.

Baseball strike halted by judge

NEW YORK (AP) — The first midseason strike in the history of organized baseball was averted late Thursday afternoon when a federal court judge ordered the players to keep playing ball while other issues are resolved.

Representatives of the players and owners met for 7½ hours at the National Labor Relations Board offices here and finally agreed not to oppose an effort to avert the strike that threatened to halt the sport after Thursday night's games.

But that agreement had to be accompanied by a court order forcing the players not to strike.

"That is agreeable with the court provided you understand that this case may be continued from day to day along with any criminal trials I may be handling at the time," said Judge Henry Werker of U.S. District Court in ruling on the request that he order the players not to strike.

University Union top floor will receive new signs

BY NANCY LEWIS
Staff Writer

New signs at the cost of about $500 will add a new appearance to the top floor of the Julian A. McPhee University Union beginning this fall.

The replacement of all the current signs on the top floor rooms is being made to give the students a different atmosphere while studying and to impress a tri-state conference being held at Cal Poly next October, according to Cathy White, Building and Maintenance Chair for the University Union.

The Associate College Unions International is an organization of all school unions from Nevada, Hawaii and California.

White wants the University Union to seem impressive and replacing the current signs she believes will help.

The plexiglass signs, are made of a hard plastic material. They will have a brownish background with gold roller-coated lettering. Some signs will be black because of reflection problems, said White.

The project was started in mid-winter quarter by White and Joe Willis, Building Operations manager of University Union, when the Activities Planning Center requested a sign.

The bottom floor is not changing with the top, said White, because of the different atmospheres. She hopes to have the bottom floor signs replaced next year.

Speaker stresses political involvement

Bureaucrats' personal aspirations and biases and the environment from which they came and live can jeopardize the actual social value of their decisions, explained Bish.

Bureaucratic mismanagement, said

Bish, can affect a person's happiness and security in life for "they can't plan ahead because they don't know what some government official will feel is important" in the future.

To answer this, Bish explained, citizens can form coersive groups to influence government decisions ostensibly made on their part.

The Constitution recognized the pluralism of the United States — that a large number of small groups was a more effective and stable means of government that meets the needs of its citizens.

Unfortunately, said Bish, it is hard to measure the effectiveness of such a system because of its complexity. "You can never get on top of it and look down," he said, and discern direct effects.

Safety equipment is bought

"We're just changing these things whether we need to or not," he said, "and at this point, I'm pretty fed up with the whole thing."

Dorm electrician John Rankin said he had similar feelings.

"I don't agree with changing these ballasts at all," he said. "It's not only a Cal Poly problem, it's a nationwide problem, and we should check with the ballast companies and government agencies to see if we're doing the right thing."

Van Acker said the California Occupational Safety and Health Administration has consulted and aided in organizing the ballast replacement program here.

Since the issue of worker safety was made public three weeks ago in the Mustang Daily, Sinzheimer said that workers have been more safety-cautious in handling the ballasts. "But if the ballasts are dangerous, I still can't see how they justify us (student electric shop workers) having to change them."

Electric shop Supervisor Larry Wright said he felt there has been no changes at all around the shop in the last two weeks. "We were already following safety precautions before anyone said anything," he said.

Christian music: Making joyful noise in the '80s

BY DAVE BRACKNEY

Special to the Daily

Praise ye the Lord... Praise Him with the sound of the trumpet: praise Him with the psalter and harp. Praise Him with the timbrel and dance: praise Him with stringed instruments and organs. Praise Him upon the loud cymbals: praise Him upon the high sounding cymbals.

— Psalm 150

as Christianity itself, but it was not until the 1970s that it gained any recognition or acceptance beyond Christian circles.

Today, as the 1980s set in on America, the influence of Christianity on the music industry is skyrocketing. In the last decade, for instance, the number of radio stations devoting at least half their air play to Christian music fitable venture, have begun to sign Christian artists as well.

From religious revival to slick marketing techniques, there have been many explanations put forth for the increasing interest in Christian music. Steve Patrotz, former vice president of Sparrow Records and current owner of Jan's Bible Book Store, sees a number of factors of production. Patrotz said. Patrotz's claim was supported by Danny Daniels, a pastor at the Vineyard Christian Fellowship of San Luis Obispo.

"For years," Daniels said, "the quality of production was bad; real sloppy, and some people excused it by saying 'God will bless it anyhow.'" Daniels believes the Christian record industry is still suffering from skepticism over this.

Christian music's biggest boost, Patrotz said, has come from an increasing exposure through concerts and the mass media.

Patrotz believes record sales at Jan's have been boosted by the steady stream of Christian performers who perform local concerts, along with Christian radio programs such as KCPR's Yahweh music.

Additionally, Patrotz believes America has experienced a recent spiritual revival, helping Christians to gain a foot hold in the music industry.

"The world's getting more black and white," Patrotz said. "Either you're a Christian or you're not. As we're getting closer to the end times, people are reacting to that."

Sales of Christian records began to take off around 1978 and show no sign of letting up, Patrotz

"The difference is that our music has a message."

Ten years ago, it meant dusty old hymnals, Southern gospel, the pipe organ and choirs singing hallelujah. Today it entails modern studios, trade magazines, sell-out concerts and gold records. It's known as Christian music, and today it continues to change and grow faster than ever before.

Best defined as music with lyrics containing a Christian message, Christian music has, of course, been around almost as long has increased from fewer than 50 to over 300 today.

Record sales have taken off as well. At Jan's Bible Book Store in downtown San Luis Obispo, Christian album sales have increased by more than 130 percent in the last year alone.

Meeting the market of Christian record buyers is an increasing number of Christian recording companies. Secular record companies, finding it a pro-that have led to the Christian music explosion.

Patrotz pointed out that the selection of Christian music available has increased greatly. Today's customer can choose from Christian jazz, classical, rock or even new wave.

"The difference," Patrotz said, "is that our music has a message."

Not only is selection better, Patrotz said, but the quality of the performing artists has improved.

"Our records are every bit as good as those in the secular market," Patrotz said. "Kids realize that their musical tastes can be totally fulfilled by this music, and they no longer go to secular stores."

Record sales have also been helped by improvements in the quality

Mustang Daily—Cathy Smith

Former vice president of Sparrow Records and present owner of Jan's Bible Bookstore Steve Patrotz thinks the current popularity of Christian music will keep growing, with the types of music having Christian messages becoming more diversified.

said. The most popular current artists, he said include B.J. Thomas, Keith Green, Amy Grant, John Talbott and the Imperials.

Except for Talbott, which he described as "almost classical," Patrotz said these artists all share a generally soft, easy-listening pop style.

However, even the top Christian performers still sell relatively few records by industry standards.

"Most Christian albums in the top 10 sell less than 100,000 copies," said Patrotz. "A rock album that sold 100,000 would usually be considered a failure."

Making a joyful noise

Patrotz hastened to point out, however, that Christian record sales have passed those of classical music and jazz.

To date, two Christians albums have been certified as "gold" for selling half a million copies, and Patrotz expects this number to increase before the end of 1981.

Like Patrotz, Daniels is also excited about the commercial potential of Christian music, but stressed that sales figures are not as important as the message delivered. A former member of the group Bethlehem, Daniels believes serving God should be more important than earning a gold record.

"We have that responsibility to orient people toward Jesus Christ, not toward buying more albums."

Some performers, Daniels said, also fail to honor God when their music contains "trite" lyrics with "little content" and "not much comment on life."

Successful Christian music, Daniels said, should express an artist's true feelings toward the Lord and "isn't filled with cliches."

"I like to express the reality of where I am with the Lord," said Daniels, who has authored more than 200 Christian songs. "I believe people are looking for reality and are turned off by a phony."

In recent months, Daniels has become involved with promoting local concerts sponsored by the Vineyard, making him the most recent promoter in the history of Christian concerts in San Luis Obispo. Past performers here have included the Sweet Comfort Band, Terry Talbott and most recently, Phil Keaggy.

Despite its popularity, many older Christians feel modern Christian music is a "tool of Satan" because of the music's style and artist's physical appearance. Daniels said he is aware of these charges, but said he considers them unfounded and based on ignorance.

"Christ and Satan have no common ground," Daniels said. "You can't mix light and dark together. God's totally interested in relating to people where they are."

People will continue to argue over its content and inspiration, but the influence Christian music has on the music industry, record buyers and everyday people is still with us.

Is this a musical trend that's with us to stay, or will it go the same way as bubblegum rock and disco? God only knows.

Mustang Daily—Cathy Smith

Weekend Christian concerts planned

Two Christian concerts and a Christian music workshop are scheduled for this weekend.

Cal Poly's Newman Community will present an all-day workshop on Christian music, culminating in a concert by recording artist Rob Griffen on Saturday, May 30.

The day's theme is, "Many Gifts, One Lord." The Public is invited, with a varying scale of prices for the events.

Tickets for the workshops, from 10:30 to noon and 2:30 to 4 p.m., are $5. Concert tickets only are $4 advance and $5 at the door.

Advance tickets are available at Jan's Bible Bookstore and the gift shop of Mission San Luis Obispo de Tolosa, both in San Luis Obispo.

Student tickets, $3 advance, are available at the UU box office. Door tickets for the concert are $4. For both workshops and concert, the price is $6.

Griffen will perform with the group Leaven. His latest album is "In The Beginning."

He has traveled across the country giving musical ministry workshops, concentrating on the broad area of acoustic music, and narrowing down the emphasis to contemporary Christian music.

His concert with Leaven is scheduled for Chumash Auditorium at 7 p.m.

Newman Community is a student organization for Cal Poly's Roman Catholic students.

Sunday night, Bob Bennett will perform at 7:30 in the Odd Fellow's Hall at 520 Dana St., San Luis Obispo. The concert is sponsored by the Vineyard Christian Fellowship and admission is free.

Poly dance festival open to all

Students will become teachers today for two hours in the Main Gym as Moon Ja Minn Suhr's teaching theory of recreational dance class presents an International Dance Festival.

From 3 to 5 p.m., people of all ages will be able to learn the steps to folk dances from around the world.

"It should be a lot of fun," said Terry Bauer, one of the 16 students who have been working to put the festival together.

For five generations, George Killian’s family brewed the Red in Ireland. And for five generations, they were holdin’ true to the taste.

But times were changing. And there were some who said George Killian should change, too.

“Before I change the taste,” he said, “I’ll shut the doors.”

And shut they stayed. Then, way out in Colorado, Coors asked if they could bring back the Red.

“Aye, ’tis a grand idea,” George Killian answered, “if you be brewin’ it my way.”

 And I can stop again.”

Sunday run set at Poly

Four and eight mile runs have been planned this Sunday on the Cal Poly campus.

The Cal Poly California Association for Health, Physical Education, Recreation and Dance will be sponsoring a wine and cheese run. Entrants will have the option of running either the four-mile Poly Canyon route or the eight-mile Poly loop.

The run is open to any interested runner and will begin at 9 a.m. The entry fee of either $4 or $6, depending on which course the runner desires, will be due on the day of the event.

Participants will receive shirts donated by Wine Street Inn and The Kracker Mill. Prizes will be given to the top finishers in the men's and women's divisions and a raffle for prizes donated by merchants of San Luis Obispo will be staged after the race.

Registration and check-in time will be at 8 a.m. at the starting line on the lawn in front of the university's physical education building.

Entry forms for the wine and cheese run are available for those who want to preregister. They can be obtained at the university union and physical education department office and at Bello's, Copeland's Sports, The Sports Section and San Luis Athletic Supply.

Maria Indians last weekend, will host the Range at San Luis Obispo Stadium Friday in a single game at 8:15 p.m. and on Saturday in a two-night double header at 5:30.

The Blues might have their troubles but they have nothing to be ashamed of after practicing for only a week. The Blues are actually still in spring training with the final cut set for June 13 but coach Dean Treanor only has a couple of holes to fill.

The biggest trouble now is generating some offense. The Blues only scored six runs in 27 innings against the Indians last weekend and they only collected 15 hits.

Two starting spots in the rotation have almost been secured in 29-year-old Gary Peters of Morro Bay and Poly's Scott Steele.

The infield is shaping up to be the Blues' strongest suit. Slugger Don Clegg, at first, is one man Treanor can not afford to keep out of the line-up. The left-hander practically tore the hide off of the ball in four trips to the plate Monday night. He singled, tripled and tagged a shot to deep left center for a 2-4 effort.

Poly's Ted Earle, Bruce Carrico and John Silacci all have the inside tracks to starting spots at second, catcher and third.

Shortstop is still up for grabs but Poly student Dave Rodas might have made enough of an impression on Treanor last weekend to earn the starting nod this week. He palyed a little tenatively but speared one line drive, singled, walked and stole a base.

"Guys like him (Rodas) are out here working hard and we are definitely taking a long look at him," Treanor said.

He added that, "There are some new guys out this year pushing hard and we might have our troubles now but the hard work certainly will make us a better club later on."

Schultz wins awards at banquet

The shot heard around the nation—Mike Burris' 58-foot overtime buzzer bomb—was shown so many times Wednesday night that there was talk of making it into a full length feature movie, starring James Caan.

It was only a suggestion in jest but as the happy hour wore on at the annual basketball recognition banquet the crowd was ready for anything and everything.

The dinner was staged to honor the NCAA Division II East Quarterfinal champion and No. 3-ranked Cal Poly Mustangs of coach Ernie Wheeler.

The gathering was mainly a farewell celebration to Poly's graduating seniors Rob McKone, Jim Schultz, Ernie Wheeler and Pete Neumann.

Various awards handed out included the most inspirational and best defense awards that went to Schultz, the most improved to Mike Burris and the best first year player to junior Kevin Lucas.

The Mustangs finished the season with an overall 24-8 mark, 10-4 in the California Collegiate Athletic Association and 14-3 at home. They won the East Regional championship with wins over Bloomsburg State (71-43) and Clarion State (84-61) and claimed the East Quarterfinal championship with a 77-73 win over New Hampshire College. They lost in the semi-final round of the NCAA tournament to eventual national champion Florida Southern (54-51) but won the consolation honors over Wisconsin-Green Bay (62-61).

Cal Poly cagers sign Righetti standout

Coach Marilyn McNeil has announced that Karen Smolley, a senior at Righetti High School in Santa Maria, has signed a letter of intent to play basketball for Cal Poly.

Smolley, at 5-10, was named to the first team All-CIF for her skills on the basketball court. She averaged 18.0 points per game, while pulling down 10.0 rebounds. She was credited with four assists per outing.

While playing at Righetti, Smolley saw action as both guard and forward. In her senior season she scored 31 points in one game for a career high. She has also had games of 29 and 25 points. Smolley was named Righetti's female athlete-of-the year.

According to McNeil, Smolley is rated in the top 20 high school players in California.

The Mustangs had an off year in 1981, but Smolley should be able to help Cal Poly put the game back on the right track. She will be joining Laura Buehning, who was named the Southern California Athletic Association's most valuable player. Buehning was also selected as a Division II AIAW All-American.

Cal Poly finished the season with a 12-16 overall record, and placed second in the SCAA.

Faith restored

Our faith in the U.S. system of checks and balances, in which the legislative, judicial and executive branches can block extreme or power-grabbing moves by the other two factions, received a giant boost Wednesday.

U.S. District Judge Mariana Pfaelzer issued an injunction that will stop the federal government from issuing, at least temporarily, oil and gas leases on 32 tracts between Shell Beach and Morro Bay.

The ruling was in response to a suit filed by Gov. Edmund Brown and five state agencies alledging that Interior Secretary James Watt was violating several federal statutes by leasing the tracts. The federal statutes included the Coastal Zone Management Act, which requires federal actions to be consistent with the state's coastal management plan; the National Environmental Policy Act (Watt has rendered it toothless by firing the professional staff charged with enforcing it); the Endangered Species Act—oil drilling would endanger the sea otter and the California grey whale; the Marine Mammal Protection Act; and the Outer Continental Shelf Act Amendments.

The injunction issued is only temporary, pending a final resolution of the case in July. Pfaelzer said the state's argument concerning Watt's compliance with the Coastal Zone Management Act is strong; weaker is the argument concerning endangered species.

But a step has been made in the right direction. Through much work and lobbying, California has shown it will not be pushed around by Watt, a man whose blind following of President Reagan's dead-end energy policy threatens our remaining natural treasures. The courts have backed us; hopefully, this will convince the federal government that it, too, is bound by federal law.

Great harm to credibility

Editor:

I agree with Stephanie Nelson's charge to "Change the election process...not question the product," but this comment fails to account for the fact that the process is the prime element that becomes the product. When the process is abused because of the possibility of hurting the feelings of one or more of the candidates, an even greater concern arises.

I believe there was a sincere concern with the process and the end results of the past election. John Schouten's list of grievances were apparently ignored in order to spare the ASI some perhaps due embarrassment. I feel that the senates' intentional lack of consideration in regards to these complaints legitimates an even greater harm to the ASI's credibility. Their responsibility to the students, as well as to the candidates is of great importance, for these elected officials have been given the trust of their peers.

Perhaps a new election would have only worsened the problem; but as responsible senators, being led by a responsible vice-president, this proposal should have been considered more seriously. A lack of responsible action is not what we need from our representative body.

Michael Grennier

Thanks for the 'P'

Editor:

The Student Planning Commission would like to thank Delta Sigma Phi, Gary Ketchum, his farm shop crew, Doug Gerard, and the Cal Poly Grounds Department for their work and assistance in repainting the Poly 'P' and repairing the surrounding retaining walls.

The professionalism shown by Tim O'Keefe, Mark Kelly, and their fraternity in obtaining approval for the project and funds for the necessary materials set a standard for others to follow. We encourage any student organization to take advantage of the Campus Improvement Fund and other available resources for improving the physical appearance of our campus.

Politics and the CSUC

BY NANCY LEWIS

The state Senate Republicans are working hard in Sacramento to think of ways to reduce money flowing into the California State University and Colleges system.

The proposed $42,734,643 they want cut out of the CSUC system is unveiled in their alternative budget for consideration by the state in June.

The money includes the elimination of student affirmative action programs, the sale of the Contra Costa County site and the elimination of 854.5 faculty positions by increasing the faculty/student ratio from 17.5 to 1 to 19.0 to 1.

The elimination of faculty members throughout the state is absurd. There is a shortage of teachers in higher education now—we shouldn't cut more.

In the elimination of faculty, the entire state will only be saving $19,653,500—a pittance to what education is worth.

An excerpt from the Republican budget proposal for faculty staffing ratios says the total contact hours per faculty with students are 17.3 hours per week. After talking with several Cal Poly faculty, it is found that they already spend much more time than this with students.

The budget goes on to say that "realizing the faculty has a certain amount of research that must constantly be done and certain office hours must be held, we still do not see the faculty need to be spending 23 hours a week outside of the classroom."

Supporters of the alternative budget really don't understand the educational system. Research is essential to keep the quality of education at its height, and without research, this quality would deteriorate. Research takes time, perhaps for some teachers more than 23 hours a week. If it does, let them do it.

A final excerpt from the Republicans says, "In our continued belief that the state colleges and universities should be in charge of their own allocation of resources, we would not propose that the University have to lay off faculty or increase the ratio, but rather could reallocate resources internal to their own working operations."

They contradict themselves here—do they want to decrease the faculty or not?

There is a lot more to this proposal than hours inside the classroom. For instance, interacting outside of the classroom can be much more meaningful than teaching a roomful of students, both for the student and the teacher.

An increase in the ratio will cause the quality of teaching to suffer and demoralize professors. At the same time, students will reduce their exposure to new people and ideas. We need exposure outside of a straight lecture for the stimulation of new ideas.

Inside a strict lecture class, more students per teacher is not really detrimental because of very little interaction between the two. But with labs, which are prominent at Cal Poly, an increase in students per teacher would definitely put a pressure on both.

According to Joe Weatherby, head of faculty affairs in the statewide academic senate, approximately 12 faculty members could be cut from Cal Poly. The remaining teachers would thus be bogged down with more courses while doing less research, committee work, and advising. And students might have less courses to choose from.

This counter-productive alternative budget would only increase mediocrity in the educational system of California.

No pleasure from a bottle

Editor:

How often do we sometimes equate a pleasure with a proof? How often do we seek a joy or happiness which has regretfully been induced by a substance in a bottle. Proof is the measure of the strength of a drink; happiness and joy partially measure the pleasure of an experience.

A drink is a drink; it is just with alcohol there is a little more Hawaiian in the punch, and the more you drink the punchier you get. You are never somewhat sober—you are either totally sober or drunk to some degree. Try not to view alcohol for what it does, rather view it as it is—another chemical.

Most of us want to enjoy life, but let us not confuse the chemical for the real thing. "Fulfillment is an inner knowledge, not an outer gift."

Mark Connely
